Gunn Gives Interesting Report on Farmers' Week Activities As Witnessed at Gainesville

Research Work of Agricultural Department Under Competent Heads Is Aiding All Florida Farming, Citrus, Truck, and Poultry Enterprises

CLOSE STUDY BEING CONDUCTED INTO EVERY PHASE OF TRUCKING, POULTRY RAISING, CITRUS, GENERAL FARMING

An illuminating and interesting review of the achievements made at Gainesville, during Farmers' Week, was outlined before the members of the Chamber of Commerce at Wednesday's luncheon by County Agent June Gunn, who had paid close attention to the marked advances being made by the various agricultural sections during his visit at the meeting.

Of interest to poultry raisers was the discovery of causes for sore eyes in chicken flocks, which, Mr. Gunn said, had been determined by Dr. Saunders, who, in his minute research had traced the origin of the disease to a small worm coming from roaches. He said that the worm could not propagate from the eye of chickens, but that it hatched through the roach and fled to poultry runs. While further experiments are going on with a view of exterminating the pest, Mr. Gunn said poultry raisers were cautioned to keep all houses clear of roaches as a first prevention against the disease.

The growing strawberry culture of the state received major consideration, and investigatory work has begun to determine the best soils for the cultivation of berries, beginning with Plant City farms, as well as the variety or varieties that produce the highest grade fruit. This investigation will be conducted so that other soils in Florida can be compared as to their adaptability to this enterprise.

Coupled with the research of strawberry production will be a study of diseases that dwart the growth of plants and dwarf the berry itself. It is understood that the department has discovered four major diseases and are now making an effort to determine on the proper treatment to distledge them. Nothing definite has been [illegible] in this [illegible], however.

With respect to the most prolific variety grown in Florida, Mr. Gunn said that the Missionary berry, thus far, had proved the best.

He said other departments, or investigators had been commissioned to conduct investigations all over the state. This will take experts to Hastings, where the production of potatoes and the proper seed and fertilizer, as well as cultivation methods, will be thoroughly thrashed out; it will take men into West Florida, where the type of soil and crops grown are as different from South Florida, as, he said, for instance, they are from the state of Michigan; into north Florida and the tobacco growing section of upper West Florida, where other problems must be solved.

South Florida will also have experts studying the general trucking industries, with the same view in object, as those studying further into citrus growing in the central and east coast sections will observe.

In fact, the Osceola county agent said, every section has been covered in the program of the department at Gainesville, and he expressed himself as being highly gratified with this progress which Florida growers in every branch should appreciate to the fullest as well.

Of the rubber experiments, he said the department did not seem to be as enthusiastic as the newspapers over the prospects in this venture, but that it was a possible new enterprise that might be developed here. An experimental station is being located in the Everglades, where ever assistance will be rendered to the interests now promoting rubber growing in the ten lands of the peninsula. "Mr. Edison", the county agent explained seriously, "may find that rubber can be produced there."

The planning of experiments, with vastly different soils and varying climates between Pensacola and Key West, is no small task he explained, but gave his auditors to understand that it was a certainty, and, in fact, the operations had already been launched.

His coherent manner of delivering extemporaneously his narrative held the close attention of all members and guests present.

Of the various and growing Florida enterprises, it was indicated at the outset that important consideration of the poultry business had been apparent for several years in the minds of the departmental agencies.

It is fully appreciated that a business the size of the poultry industry of this country industry of this country is entitled to more adequate and complete economic information concerning it than is now available, says Ray E. Potts, chief poultry marketing specialist of the United States Department of Agriculture. With this thought in mind a committee within the department has recently been appointed for the purpose of giving this whole question careful consideration and of working out a complete plan for obtaining adequate economic information for the industry.

Poultry keepers undoubtedly will be deeply interested in this plan, says Mr Potts, and, if approved, will wish to see it put into effect as soon as possible. The industry is fortunate in having national bodies, such as the United States Egg Society and the National Poultry Council, whose officers have been actively urging more comprehensive economic information in its behalf and who can be counted upon to do all within their power to secure the culmination of such a plan if it is found worthy.

Mayor Parker, who presided at the Chamber luncheon, took the floor after Mr. Gunn had conducted and argued everybody to urge everyone else they met to make it a point to impress upon the county commissioners the importance of cleaning out the various canals in this section of the county which connect the various lakes.

These canals act as an effective drainage system, he said, when kept open, but during the past few years so little attention had been paid to their upkeep the cows had dragged so much dirt into them that littoral dams had been formed by the cattle.

He said that during the heavy rains of three years ago the roads in the community would not have been so deeply flooded had the canals been properly opened before hand. He bore out this assertion by reason of the fact that when he came here a good many years ago, the chain of canals in this section of the county were so splendidly maintained that heavier rains falling then had not caused water to back up upon the roads.

Mr. and Mrs. Anson McGill and children, Kenneth, Marguerite, and baby son, and Mr. McGill's sister, Miss Marguerite McGill, and Preston Johnson, enjoyed a stay at the McGill homestead at Southport this week.

EDWARD BANCROFT DIES SUDDLENLY IN MAINE

William S. Ward, of St. Cloud, head of the Wm. S. Ward & Company, upholsterers and Freedsem fitters, with offices in St. Cloud, Orlando and Kissimmee, has received a letter from his son, who was in Portland, Maine, at the writing, wherein Mr. Ward, Jr., reports the sudden death of Edward Bancroft, who has a winter home at 405 North Pennsylvania avenue, St. Cloud, and a summer home in Portland.

At the time of Mr. Bancroft's death, he was sitting, with his wife, on the piazza of a neighbor, when he suddenly toppled over upon the floor, and a few minutes later, was dead. Heart failure is given as the cause of his passing away.

The many friends of the deceased will learn the foregoing news with deepest regret, as Mr. Bancroft only recently had expressed his intention of disposing of all his property in the north with a view of investing the proceeds therefrom in St. Cloud business. His wife took the death of her husband as a terrible shock, but is now recovering.

DOYLE E. CARLTON

Mr. Carlton is a candidate for Governor, subject to the Democratic primaries of June, 1928.

His youth, experience and success in administrative affairs, his polished gift of presentation and oratory place him in an enviable position to capture the prize.

He has strongly behind him the creator of Florida Governors —THE TAMPA TRIBUNE. To make it still staunchier, he is being supported also by THE TAMPA TIMES, equally important in the evening field.

PROF. GEIGER IS BACK FROM HIS SUMMER STUDIES

Prof. A. J. Geiger, in charge of the Agricultural department of the St. Cloud high school, arrived here the latter part of last week from Gainesville, where he took a summer course at the University of Florida. Prof. Geiger has been taking summer courses at the University and proposes continuing these until he secures the highest degree to be had in this line of study.

This year's summer session at the University, Professor Geiger stated, was the largest in the history of the institution, probably more than 1,200 students being enrolled in the various departments.

MRS. MANN INSTALLS GENERAL ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR

Mr. Hill of the Modern Home Shop on New York avenue announces the installation of an electric refrigerator in the home of Mrs. B. G. Mann, who has recently remodeled her residence at 727 Pennsylvania avenue. She has put in many improvements but found it uncomfortable without electric refrigeration. Hence, after making careful comparison, she placed an order for the General Electric refrigerator and its installation was made immediately by Mr. Hill's forces.

Mrs. Mann soon will be able to tell her neighbors how to make all sorts of frozen delicacies for the summer mean, as she has already stated that this refrigerator is the greatest convenience she has ever had or seen in a home.

JUSTICES APPOINT A BOARD TO PLAN CONSTITUTION: FIRST STEPS TAKEN

Appointment of a committee to draft a constitution and by-laws which will govern future activities was the chief feature of the first day's session of state constables and justices of the peace assembled in Orlando for a three-day convention, when plans for the perfecting of a state organization will be completed.

No election of permanent officers was held yesterday as members at the meeting wished to have the constitution and by-laws completed prior to naming officials of the association.

Due to the fact that a number in arriving in the city yesterday, of the invited delegates were late the opening of the meeting, which had been scheduled for 9 o'clock in the morning, was deferred until 3 o'clock in the afternoon at which time the program was opened.

Moore is Chairman

The meeting was called to order yesterday by Justice Hal Lorraine of Orange county, who then introduced Justice T. G. Moore of St. Cloud and installed him as temporary chairman. By a popular vote Judge Moore was retained for the entire duration of the meeting.

Those named to serve on the committee for the drafting of a constitution and by-laws were Judge Moore, Miami, Judge Burney, Jacksonville, and Constable Smith, of Dade county. The committee was instructed to make all efforts to have the work completed for this morning, when it will be acted upon by delegates. Following this an election of permanent officers of the association will be held.

The meeting proper was opened with an address of welcome from Mayor I. M. Autrey who tendered the visitors a hearty invitation to make the best of their stay in Orlando. He went with some detail into the strides made by Orange county along the road of expansion and development and cited several instances showing the expenditures being made by the county and the city for new roads and general improvements.

Response to his address was made by Judge Moore of Miami, while Constable Fred P. Lord, of Jacksonville, who was scheduled to respond for the state constabulary, was unable to attend the meeting. A brief extemporaneous talk was given by another visitor.

Baker Speaks

Chief of Police H. F. Baker, who was largely instrumental in bringing the convention to this city, gave a stirring talk to the assembled, in which he urged them to form a strong and active association which would function for the best interests of the state as a whole. The chief also pledged full cooperation for his department.

The session today will be devoted to another business session, when action will be taken on the report of the special committee on the constitution and the election of officers. A question box will be a feature of the day, in which all will participate. This will automatically launch an open forum discussion, when questions pertaining to the problems confronting officials will be considered.

An entertainment program will also be an order of the day in which an athletic program will be held and a "Hooping Flea" contest inaugurated. An entertainment feature will be held in the Phillips theatre. This has been arranged by Chief Baker.

Big Armistice Day Ceremonies and Home-Week Festivities Will Make St. Cloud Gay

American Legion Committee Expresses Desire To Do Everything the Legionnaires Can Do To Make the Entire Celebration Great Success in Every Respect

NOTED SPEAKERS HAVE BEEN INVITED TO DELIVER ADDRESSES ON AMERICANISM ON ARMISTICE DAY

Plans for a general home-coming celebration in St. Cloud during that week in November on which Armistice Day falls gained further momentum Wednesday afternoon when a committee of the local Legion Post met in Mayor Parker's office to map out a tentative program for the Legion activities on that occasion.

At the conclusion of the meeting, however, it was announced that no definite statement could be issued, since the plans of the committee would first go before the members of the local post for approval. The committee appointed at Monday night's meeting of the Post is comprised of Mayor Colvin Parker, E. R. Becker, H. F. Caterer and A. J. Geiger.

It was the belief of the committee, however, that the Legion as a whole would be pleased to do everything within its reach to assist in any other of the home-week days, which are scheduled to run from Tuesday to Saturday, November 8-12, with the Legion conducting all ceremonies for Friday, the 11th.

Judge E. C. Darlington, commander of the Tampa Post, and former Judge of the Juvenile Court of that city, has been invited to deliver the address of the day. Aside from being one of the more gripping orators in the entire state, Judge Darlington is a man of great achievements otherwise. He went through the war with a determination that knows no defeat, playing his part in the fray. He never stopped smiling, and although he suffered from a shock received in the service, he maintained a fortitude that few could have held.

He secured as many as 30 members in one day for the Tampa Post, and 300 all told within a short time after his election as commander.

Bare-headed Bill Steits, of Lakeland, past-state commander, will also be another speaker of the day, if it is found that he can attend the St. Cloud ceremonies. He is one of the boys who deeply imbued with the perpetuation of the Legion and the ideals of Americanism it so nobly stood and fought for and still stand for.

"Americanism" will be the subject of all ceremonies, and the day will be reckoned as from sunrise to sunset.

As tentatively outlined the Legion parade will start from G. A. R. Hall at 11:00 a. m., slowly marching to the city park, where silence will be observed as taps are rendered. In the parade will be the G. A. R. and the Spanish War Veterans, with their commanders. There is no member of the Confederacy here, it was said, nor any local organization representing it. The line of March will be published at a later date, as well as a definite program, both with reference to the speakers of the occasion as well as other ceremonies. It is not known definitely at this time, for instance, whether both Mr. Steits or Judge Darlington can be in St. Cloud for the occasion.

It is further planned to recess for an ample length of time during the afternoon so that everyone in the city can witness the scheduled game between the Kissimee and St. Cloud high school football teams.

After the game has ended, further Legion ceremonies will find a place for the remainder of the day—until sunset, when a brilliant lance, with other entertainment will be arranged for the evening.

As is known to all, the Legion ceremonies are of a serious and dignified character throughout the day, with strictest observance for their departed comrade.

The order in which the principal speakers will appear and the introductory proceedings, including the chairman of the day, will also be announced in a later issue of the Tribune, after the same has been worked out definitely and approved by the local committee and the St. Cloud Post.

The other four days of the celebration, that of home-coming week, it is suggested will be sponsored, say, one day by the Chamber of Commerce, one day by the Eastern Star and Masons of the city, another probably by the G. A. R. and their friends and families and the last Saturday, as a sort of general wind up day, with street dancing as the big attraction during the evening.

The Legion boys, having expressed a willingnes to do everything within their reach to aid the sponsors of any of the other days, will be glad to hear from other organizations interested in making the occasion one of the most successful ones ever witnessed in St. Cloud.

BARTLETT SAYS BIG CROWDS COMING TO ST. CLOUD

A letter from Thomas Bartlett of Alma, Mich., who conducts the Shoe Hospital at the corner of Eleventh street and Pennsylvania and who has requested W. S. Ward, to whom the letter was addressed, to tell the good people of St. Cloud to be prepared to receive and house a large number of tourists this winter, is enjoying himself splendidly.

Mr. Bartlett says people interested in Florida gather around him everywhere he goes, inquiring about conditions as they exist at present, and that he always tell them to go to a place called St. Cloud. He assures Mr. Ward in his letter that it is certain that a large number from his home city in Michigan will leave for St. Cloud this fall and winter, with a view of purchasing a home and establishing their future residence. He says he has advised them that never again will they be able to buy a home as reasonable as one can be had at present prices.

Mr. Bartlett will leave Alma the last of the month with some up to date shoe machinery and a large stock of shoe material to last over the winter season.

EMINENTLY CORRECT

Watching the out-of-town bread wagons—rushing into and out of St. Cloud every day—a stranger spoke to the reporter yesterday thusly:

"What's the matter? Don't you know the St. Cloud Bakery is as far ahead of the requirements of your town as the bakeries you are patronizing in other towns are ahead of theirs?"

His thought should spread. Our St. Cloud Bakery is a credit to the city—yet, how many of us even stop to think where our bread comes from. We know it comes from the sweat of the brow, but whose brow? Whose brow concerns more people than the merit of production.

The men are less concerned than the women, for a man usually picks up the first loaf in sight, whether it comes from north, south, east or west.

Better times are better stimulated at home and the encouragement of home enterprise is to be considered first. The foregoing not only applies to the subject of our inquiree, but to every other business in St. Cloud.

BUZZ SAW RIFS BILL CRUM'S RIGHT HAND

The many friends of Bill Crum regret to learn that he suffered a rather painful accident to the right hand while using a buzz saw a few days ago. He was preparing certain minute pieces to be employed in the new home he is building and as the saw hit him it struck three fingers on the right hand, cutting them to the bone.

Due to his inability to use the hand, it will delay the completion of his home for four or five weeks.

Did you ever notice that the most successful men are those who are most cheerful?

The reason so many of these modern efforts are a "flop" is because they're based on "bunk."

The average young flapper quite often gets made, quarrels and cries—but they soon "make-up."

An Exchange says business is like a bicycle—to be safe from falling it must be kept moving forward.

Denver ordinance gives women motorists right of way over male drivers. They take it down here ordinance or no ordinance.

Chicago husband asks divorce because wife fired at him with an old fashioned revolver. She may use an up-to-date one next time.

Prohibition Chief Lowman says Uncle Sam has enough whiskey on hand to last seven years for medicinal purposes, which is still news for the bootleggers.

New York now has its White Way cops dressed in tuxedo dinner suits. We just know some humorous soul in a night club brawl will sooner or later conceive the idea of tossing uncorked catsup bottles.

SACCO—VANZETTI!

If the press would forget both and expunge every line of so-called news concerning their spectacular and desperate attempts to arouse public sympathy, incite strikes and foment anarchy, America would be better for it.

The letters these murderers are broadcasting border on high treason and their circulation should be curbed.

SOMETHING NEW

Charles D. Haines announces for governor—not that this is new news, because he said four years ago he was going to get into Florida politics—claimed to be in, and then got out.

But Mr. Haines, though a Democrat, is going to run independent because he fears his policies will hurt the party. That's a new idea, no mistake.

But Mr. Haines forgets that there really is no Democratic party in Florida. The Florida primary is but little more than a white primary. Republicans and Democrats alike rush the ballot box and both of them together seem unable to get out more than half the vote that ought to be polled.

Peter Knight was right—and Mr. Haines' announcement merely accentuates the fact—Florida needs a couple of vigorous political parties.

Your Home Paper Is Indispensable

The power of the weekly and small daily newspapers is sometimes discounted, says the Tampa Tribune. Perhaps this is because they are considered individually and not collectively as that imposing assemblage of newspapers which serves the 60,000,000 Americans who live in communities of less than 5,000 population and on the farm.

Call them "only a little country newspaper," but remember they fill a need in their communities as great as that of the large city dailies. The weekly and small daily are as impatiently awaited by their readers as the metropolitan editions.

Because these weekly and small daily newspaper are in the majority and because they are inseparably linked with community thought and action it is of them that E. W. Howe speaks:

"Give me a newspaper to operate in and I can raise the devil, or pacify him, every day. Clergymen hold great councils to discuss world betterment, but editors and reporters do not, although much more powerful than clergymen; indeed, editors and reporters are easily our most powerful public men."

It is only when the army of small newspapers are mobilized behind one cause that their irresistible influence in public affairs is fully appreciated, although the influence each exerts in its own community is always sensed.

Inadequate space and facilities forbid the little home-town paper from combining within itself all that large volume of matter now offered by itself and the metropolitan dailies, but the average reader finds his local journal more indispensible than his city paper. That the weeklies and small dailies are a force in their respective communities is fully established.

Political Buccaneers Unpopular

There is a time-honored belief that preceding a presidential election year, business shows up and uncertainty prevails.

There have been good grounds for such a supposition because in the past political leaders and political parties dealt ruthlessly with the wage earner and the investor in their effort to inflame the public on so-called "party issues," and ride into office on a wave of indignation or misunderstanding of the voters.

The day of political buccaneering is passing just as did the days of the seafaring pirate. The people are better informed. They realize that certain basic conditions must be maintained in the country if employment and security of investments are to prevail. They know that these conditions must be maintained by whatever party is in power. They do not listen with favor to the radical members of any party who would use their party as a vehicle for exploiting visionary theories which would endanger the stability of the country. The people begin to realize that the title of President of the United States is synonymous with the term General Manager of a great corporation which is responsible for the well-being of thousands of workmen and investors.

Never in the history of the United States have the people had such an object lesson in the close parallel between government and business as since the World War. During that time millions of citizens have invested money on which they wished to earn a fair interest return. They have found that without safe and stable government their investments and their earning are imperiled. Therefore, they have been forcibly impressed with the fact that good government and good business go hand in hand, and you cannot have one without the other.

The people realize that the prosperity of this nation in a large measure depends upon their public officials, and they are frowning upon the public official who plays fast and loose with the obligations he has assumed as a public servant and employe, merely to further his own political aims. Conditions are most unfavorable to politicians who want to start something. The people have had several years of unbroken prosperity, are living well, buying cars and eating their fill; wearing the best clothes they ever had, going to movies and ball games, traveling from one end of Our Country to the other, listening to the radio and enjoying life. They realize that these advantages are the result of stable and steady employment and earnings.

Any candidate for public office must recognize these facts, and realize his responsibilities when he asks the people to put him in charge as virtual manager or division superintendent of the governmental and business affairs of this nation.

It may cut deeply into some sensative mind, not necessarily locally but all over Florida, to admonish the man with a business or a trade or a profession to stick to that business, now that times are coming back in Florida—and don't "hop out" again into "the real estate business", which in so far as the "take-a-fling-at-it" type is concerned, means no business at all. As a business, to the man who has made it a life study and his only business, the real estate business is among the largest in the world, but the man who succeeds in it and holds his own regardless of the inevitable cycles of reverse, must be one who plays no attention to any other.

Of course, the painfully taught lesson which thousands of men and women learned, as a result of their mistakes during the boom of 1925 and the error they made by quitting vocations and enterprises they had followed all those years before, will not be forgotten. But a new set, not seasoned in such mistakes, is likely to leap out into the fire again. Don't do it, unless you have abounding faith in yourself to make it your business the balance of your life, or until such time as you have acquired fortune enough to retire.

Heed the warning once laid down by the late Andrew Carnegie, who told a young man to concentrate on one and only one business. In Mr. Carnegie's own words, it is written: "Concentrate your energy, your thought and your capital. Once you have started along a certain line, decide to follow it to the end. Adopt all improvements, have the best machinery, and learn everything you can. Business organizations that fail are those that scatter their capital, by which I mean they also have scattered their brains. You should decide to know the business which is your livelihood, to know it to the bottom so that you can be an expert in your specialty. Do not allow any man in your specialty to know more than you do. Study everything that has been done on earth in your specialty. The wise man puts all his eggs in one basket and watches the basket. If he is a coffee merchant his whole attention is given to coffee, if he is a sugar merchant his whole attention is given to sugar and he leaves coffee alone. The only relationship that he maintains between coffee and sugar is when he mixes them in his cup. I have never yet met a man who was successful when he engaged in two different kinds of business."

Shame on Maryland

The Racing Commission of Maryland hereafter will permit a maximum dividend of 12 1-2 per cent to stockholders in the horse race gambling industries in that State, such dividends, as usual, to be paid by the honesty, honor, lives and souls of deluded victims and by the grief and suffering of many women and children. Race gambling stock is "watered stock"—watered by women's tears. And the State of Maryland draws its proportion of this blood money, and a leading political boss draws $10,000 a year salary as an "adviser." The advice given is probably how to keep this diabolical curse in operation by the control of politics.—Manufacturers Record.

Needed Practice

Lord Habbington was instructing the new colored servant in his duties adding: "Now, Zeke, when I ring for you, you must answer me by saying, 'My lord, what will you have?'"

A few hours afterwards, having occasion to summon the servant, his lordship was astonished with the following:

"My David, what does you want now?"

Just As Easy

Professor A—Do you know, I find it difficult to remember the ages of my children?

Professor B—I have no such trouble. I was born twenty-three hundred years after Socrates, my wife eighteen hundred years after the death of Tiberius Caesar, she was John two thousand years after the entrance into Rome of Tiberius Sempronius Gracchus for the re-enactment of the ledges of Licinius, and our Amanda fifteen hundred years after the beginning of the Folk wandering—that is perfectly simple, you see.

Dr. Frank Crane Says

Human Factor Wealth of Nation

People who pile up billion-dollar fortunes in the steel business, in banking, in automobiles and otherwise are supposed to be the greatest adders to the wealth of the country.

Some years ago, however, John Ruskin wrote about "The Veins of Wealth" in an article in which he held that the true wealth of the nation consisted not in the yellow veins of gold running through the earth, but in the blue veins of human blood.

In other words, men were worth more to a country than natural resources.

Had the Pilgrim fathers, who landed on the bleak shores of New England some years ago landed in Manila, the Philippines would be in this time have been as prosperous as Massachusetts. Take all the Philippines and transfer them to New England and in their stead put New Englanders in the Philippine Islands, in a short time New England would be devasted and the Philippines prosperous.

It is men who make the country.

With this in view we consider Senora Esperidiana Chavez, 89 years of age, of Los Angeles, rocking the cradle of her one hundred and sixty-second direct descendant. She has nine daughters and two sons and they are all prolific.

Mrs. Chavez has therefore added to the country more wealth than that of John D. Rockefeller.

Property has to be cared for and property rights to be respected, but the most inestimable treasure of the land is its human beings.

France is supposed to be decadent because the death rate piles up and the birth rate is decreasing. On the contrary, it is faced by prolific Germany with a steadily increasing population.

The most important power in the earth is its out-populating power.

This, in the end, wins more battles than armies or battleships.

The health and vigor of a nation is a better defense to that nation than armies and equipment. No matter how many tools you have, it takes men to use them.

No matter how marvelous and complete is a locomotive, it is valueless without an expert engineer. No matter how good your airplane, you have to have a Lindbergh to make it a success.

In the end, it is always the human factor, and men do well to conserve life above all other things.

TRAVELING

This country, as everybody knows, has more miles of railroad track than any other country in the world. Something that ought to make railroad managers and their stockholders think is the fact that "common carrier" motor candidts lines have more miles of bus routes than railroads have of rail lines. Two hundred and seventy thousand miles for the buses, 257,000 miles for the railroads.

When airplanes begin competing with the railroads and buses the situation will be more complicated. Children in the schools now will tell their children: "I remember when my father used to travel long distances in the railroad train. When he went to California he had to sleep four nights on the train."

PASS NO FENCE LAW

NEW SMYRNA—Following a referendum to the county's enacted at the last session of the Florida legislature on the no fence law, an election was held in Volusia county and ratified by a large majority to fence the cattle. The vote was nearly four to one.

Contrary to expectations, the results from stock raising communities in the county showed that the no-fence measure was strongly favored.

YOUNG MEN

In a bank vault in Tokio lies $500,000 worth of solid gold, nobody knows who owns it, nobody claim it. Many a young man will say, "I would do anything to get that $500,000 gold, that nobody claims."

Young gentlemen should remember that in their own brains, in their resources of patience, common sense and energy, $500,000 in real money and more may be found if they want to work. They needn't do "Anything" to get it, just work and be steady.

Breaking the News

"Uncle, you promised me a speedster, if I didn't get married until I graduate."

"Yes, Gladyes."

"Well, uncle, you've saved some money!"

AGED KANSAS FARMER BUILDS TYPICAL GARDEN OF EDEN, DEVELOPING THE MOSAIC IDEA OF MAN'S CREATION

LUCAS, Kans.—The Black Hills of South Dakota may be the best place for a people at to spend his vacation; Florida may be the next thing to Paradise, and the Garden of the Gods may be in Colorado, but [illegible]

If you're looking for the Garden of Eden, lighted by electricity, come to Kansas.

Adam and Eve are here, also Cain and Abel, the serpent and the apple. You can come and see them for yourself.

Built on Moses' Plans

When Moses wrote in the Book of Genesis his description of the famous garden where Adam fell and Eve pushed him, Moses may or may not have had an idea that his description would be used as plans and specifications for 20th century reconstruction of the garden, but that is just what has happened.

The recreator of Eden is S. P. Dinsmoor, prosperous and retired farmer of 84, who 30 years ago set himself to work rebuilding the Garden.

His job is now just about done, and for a job, it's a pretty good job.

Recreator Dinsmoor has followed Moses just as closely as he could.

Moses says that man was formed "of the dust of the ground."

Dinsmoor made his Adam out of the dust of the ground, too, only he mixed in cement.

And there's the secret of this whole Eden-in-Kansas project.

It's all built in cement, even to the square and compass upon girt about Adam's loins, to show that the original ancestor was a "finer."

Twenty-nine cement trees, some of them 40 feet in height, a cement-eyed cement Eve, a wormless cement apple, a cement serpent are all in the Garden.

Cement birds and beasts perch on the cement limbs of the cement trees looking for cement insects which are not there.

Was the building of this Garden of Eden a good idea?

Just ask Dinsmoor.

Married Girl of 29

Dinsmoor attributes his health to the fact that he lives in the Garden of Eden.

Three years ago, when he was 81, Dinsmoor was married to a beautiful young lady of 29, who is now hostess of the Garden and shows visitors about, pointing out the snake and other properties.

The Dinsmoors have a lovely little two-year-old daughter, Shally Jane, who has never known a day of sickness and has never taken a dose of medicine—because, you see, she lives in the Garden of Eden, where there is no sickness. Adam and Eve are Shally Jane's playmates.

In fact, says Eden's contractor and builder, "My wife is no younger than I am, for we live in the Garden of Eden where youth is perpetual."

Dinsmoor originally set out to follow exactly the account of Moses, but as the work went along, he reasoned that the great prophet had omitted a few things.

LUCK, NOT GENIUS BRINGS SUCCESS SAYS ROSENWALD

Big wealth does not indicate genius, according to Julius Rosenwald, one of the nation's richest merchants and a great philanthropist of Chicago.

It was on his 65th birthday, according to an Associated Press writer, that Mr. Rosenwald paused with characteristic modesty and said "luck, not genius," brought him success.

"I was lucky, not a genius," he said, "and I think you will find that is true of most rich men. With rare exception, the man who accumulates great wealth displays no more genius than the capital prize winner in the Louisiana lottery. By luck he got hold of a good thing, at the right time, and by more luck he held onto it."

Forty two years ago, Mr. Rosenwald started his Chicago career with a little clothing factory in the third story loft of an old business block. From that meagre start, the future head of the firm of Sears Roebuck grew.

Mr. Rosenwald is a sincere believer in aiding to education those to whom it was apparently a thing beyond their consideration.

More than $2,000,000 of his fortune has been given to the University of Chicago, while $3,000,000 has been turned over to the development of the negro. Another $3,000,000 is being spent for industrial museums.

A HOOSIER THINKS MORE OF FLORIDA THAN EVER

Solomon Inman, formerly of Indiana, but now living in Clermont, Fla., has just returned from his old home in the Hoosier state with a story of thermometer fluctuations which caused him to hurry back to Clermont with the Raven's "Never More."

He went to spend a month with his daughter who lives at Bedford, Ind. While there he found the thermometer at 58 one day. Four days later it abruptly jumped to 110. "Too much for me," said Mr. Inman, who proclaims his intention of spending future vacations among the lakes and hills of Lake county.

HOW TO KILL ANTS

To eradicate household ants, a syrup poisoned with arsenate of soda is effective where it can be safely used. To make it 1 pound of sugar is dissolved in a quart of water to which 125 grains of arsenate of soda is added. Use it after boiling and straining, on sponges, placed where the ants will find them easily. The sponges are collected several times daily and the ants swarming on them are killed by immersion in hot water.

GOD'S PROMISE TO DAVID

Lesson Text—I Chronicles 17:1-15

David found himself living in a splendid costly house. His life had been so full of the desire to exalt the Lord, that it was most natural that in time of reflection it crossed his mind that the ark of the covenant, the symbol of God's presence, was resting in a cheap and temporary tent. The contrast of things impressed him painfully.

This far he certainly is to be commended. What would happen if our church members today paused to contrast the luxury in which they live with the dilapidation of the church where they worship? Many of them, and to say, spend far more for movies, chewing gum, tobacco, lipsticks and rouge than they contribute to the service of God.

David formed the idea of erecting a costly temple. His design was communicated to the prophet Nathan, who heartily approved. Neither had consulted God. Both were mistaken in their assurance that it would meet with the divine approval. Our most well-meant ideas for advancing God's cause may often meet with a veto when submitted to the Lord in prayer.

It was not the right time to build this costly house, nor was David God's man for undertaking it. That very night God made plain His will in the matter to Nathan (v. 3). God had called David from the sheepcote for one specific task, to establish His people Israel as a nation; to bring them rest in the land He had promised long before to Abraham.

Though we consider ourselves abundantly qualified to undertake greater things, it is well for us to stick to the task to which we are certain God has called us. Elsewhere and at another time God commended David's purpose and gave his reason for declining it. He would indeed have a house, but another would have the glory of seeing it completed. That is a bitter pill to some of us—just to step back and let the other fellow carry out our "original ideas."

David was a man of war. Let him enlarge the borders of Israel. David was a sweet psalmist. Let him write the Psalms which should be used in God's house throughout generations to come. How much more we may accomplish in the end if we devote ourselves to the specific tasks for which God has fitted us! The genius of David's son would better suit the building of the house, and financial conditions would be more favorable.

The prophetic message reminds David that the Lord had never asked for a house of cedar. It recalled the fact that David's past life had been wholly shaped and blessed of God because David had stuck to the Lord's will. Then, strange to say, the king's proposal was reversed. "The Lord telleth thee," said Nathan, "that he will build thee an house" (v. 10).

The promise concerning a peaceful dwelling place for Israel was faithfully performed to David and his seed in due time. There can be no doubt but that the promises were directly concerning David's natural posterity and earthly kingdom, but their larger and sublimer reference is certainly according to the plainest Scriptural teaching, to Christ, the Son of David, and His spiritual kingdom. Their culmination reaches to His second coming and universal rule.

David is here informed of One who should be of his seed according to the flesh, and who should have an everlasting kingdom, and who should build Him an house. We certainly do not see the complete fulfilment of this in Solomon. There is, as in many prophetic utterances, a double meaning.

The New Testament presents Christ as the promised seed and Son of David. According to both Old and New Testaments, it is His kingdom which shall be established forever. The plain statement of the Apostle Paul to the church is that, "Of this man's seed (David's) hath God, according to His promise (He is citing this very promise before us) raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus."

There has arisen in recent years an attempt to make out that all New Testament references to Christ as "Son of David," to have to do with temporal promises belonging alone to Israel as a nation. The expression being found in Matthew's Gospel, some have relegated the entire contents of this Gospel to the Jews in a future age.

This is strangely jugling in view of the fact that Paul, the special apostle to the Gentiles, persists in relating the promises of David to the present Gospel age, and in the latest of his Epistles (2 Tim. 2:8) calls upon believers to "remember Jesus Christ as the son of David."

Paul's Epistle to the Church at Rome sprang very similarly to the Gospel of Matthew, for he tells us that his "Gospel of salvation" is "concerning Jesus Christ our Lord, the seed of David . . . and declared to be the Son of God with power by the resurrection" (Rom. 1:3-4). Chapter 4 of the same Epistle definitely relates the covenant of grace to the promises made, both to Abraham and to David. The blessedness of these promises, he argues, is not for the circumcision (Jews) only, but for all who have like faith with Abraham and David.

The New Testament closes, as it opens, by reminding us that Christ "is the root and offspring of David, the bright and morning star" (Rev. 22:16), which shall soon appear for the Church. Thus at beginning, middle and end of the New Testament we are reminded that our relationship to God is through the One who is the son of David.

And what shall be said as to the eternal house which David's greater Son should build? Who can fail to see that Solomon's temple stood as a type of another and eternal temple?

We need not pause to argue the question as to whether or not a literal temple must be erected by the Jews at Jerusalem in order to save the face of the prophecies. Suffice it for our present purpose to know that the apostle Peter saw a great temple being built of "living stones," Jesus Christ being it's "chief corner stone" (1 Pet. 2:4-6).

To the Corinthian Church Paul said: "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God?" (1 Cor. 2:16). Later he compares individual Christians to temples indwelt of God (1 Cor. 6:19). The Ephesian Christians were told that they were "built upon the foundation of the prophets and apostles, Jesus Christ Himself being the chief corner stone, in whom all the building fitly formed together, growth into an holy temple in the Lord" (Eph. 2:20-21).

Are you one of the stones of that living and ever-enduring temple? It is evident that those who will have nothing to do with Jesus Christ as a personal Saviour cannot be a part of it, for He is its chief corner stone.

—o—

PITH AND POINT

If God declines to accept our method, He at least gives us credit for our motive (1 Kings 8:18).

Men who cannot bear to lavish more upon self than they give to God, are as scarce as hen's teeth.

Many a man has had to be turned down flat before he would learn the folly of human opinion in the things of God (vs. 3-4).

Whatever we sincerely design to do for God, we shall in no wise lose our reward for, though providence prevents vents our doing it (v. 9).

Though we cannot build God a house, He will not fail to build us one (v. 10).

Fidelity in the humble place fits one for divine favor in the higher place (v. 7).

We cannot afford to let our generous impulses outrun the command of God.

SUGGESTIVE QUESTIONS

How did David happen to live in a cedar house? (1 Chron. 14:1).

What was the prime reason that the task of building the temple was not committed to David? (1 Chron. 22:7-8).

Can God do for believers now what He did for David? (v. 7; cp. Psa. 113:5-8;113:5-8).

Did David have any better promises than believers now have? (v.8; cp. Eph. 1:18-20; Isa. 55:3).

In whom was the immediate and partial fulfillment of the Davidic Covenant? (1 Kings 8:20; 5:5; 1 Chron. 22:9, 10; 28:6-10.

In whom will be the final and complete fulfilment? (Isa. 9:6,7; 11:1-3, 10; Matt. 22:42-44; Acts 2:30).

Whose throne is it that is to be established forever? (Isa. 9:7; Luke 1:32,33).

Where is this eternal King sitting until the time comes when He shall have universal rule? (Acts 2:32-35).

New Life of Christ

Prof. Shirley J. Case, of Chicago University, whose book, "Life of Jesus Christ," will be off the press this month, says the Disciples were politically ambitious and hoped for royal jobs when Christ became King of Palestine. It is predicted the book will create much discussion.

GOLDEN TEXT ILLUSTRATION

Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever: a sceptre of righteousness is the sceptre of thy kingdom (Heb. 1:8).

One of the most ancient hieroglyphic representations of God was the figure of an eye upon a sceptre, to denote that God sees and rules all things.

"There is an Eye that never sleeps
Beneath the wing of night;
There is an Ear that never shuts
When sinks the beams of light.

"There is an Arm that never tires
When human strength gives way;
There is a love that never fails
When earthly loves decay.

"That Eye is fixed on seraph thrones,
That Ear is filled with Angels' songs;
That Arm upholds the worlds on high;
That Love is throned beyond the sky."

PLANT NOW

The Extension Service for growing in north and central Florida says now is the time to plant the following for fall maturity:

Beans, beets, cabbage (seed), celery, (seed) cantaloupes, cauliflower (seed) cress, cucumbers, collards, eggplant (seed), Irish potatoes, kale, kohlrabi, okra, onions, parsnips, peppers, radishes, rape, rutabagas, salsify, spinach, squash, tomatoes, turnips.

ENGLISH MASONS ERECT PEACE MEMORIAL

BIRMINGHAM, Eng.—The Masons of the Province of Warwickshire are erecting a temple which is to be a lasting memorial to those who made the Supreme Sacrifice in the World War and as an expression of gratitude to The Grand Architect of the Universe for peace.

The corner-stone of this temple was laid by electric synchronization on July 8, 1926, and the building is now nearing completion. It is expected that it will be ready for occupation in September and the opening ceremony has been fixed for the 23rd of that month.

SAYS STATE WILL BE WORLD CENTER

(Bradenton Herald)

ORLANDO, Fla.—Florida is destined to become one of the world's helio-therapy centers in a score of years, in the opinion of Dr. W. D. Sheldon of Rochester, Minn., associated with the Mayo clinic.

Dr. Sheldon, with other notables of the medical profession, recently spent several days at Mount Plymouth, sports center near here.

"The great medicinal properties of the Florida sunshine are rapidly becoming known to the medical world," he said, "and mankind is destined to utilize nature's offering."

Dr. Sheldon declared that the Florida sunshine is at least equal in curative properties to that of the resorts of Europe.

"I predict," he said, "that within a score of years as many people will be coming to Florida for the curative powers of the sun as now visit the famous resorts of Europe.

"With the inevitable building of great sanitariums in Florida, the thousands of people who now visit the heliotherapy centers in Europe where tuberculosis of the bone and kindred ailments are treated by exposure to the sun rays, will come to Florida. They will find it more convenient, cheaper, and equally as effective, for Florida with her wonderful sunshine is truly a health giving resort."

Mrs. S. W. Lackey returned with her party of five Saturday evening from Daytona Beach where they spent a delightful week enjoying the surf bathing and visiting neighboring points of interest.

Those in the party were Mrs. Bertha G. Mann, Charles Lincoln, Mrs. S. Borden, Miss Anna May Hoppe and Mrs. S. W. Lackey.

Mrs. Lackey's son, Roy S. Lackey, and party of five also enjoyed the week at the beach. Mr. Lincoln and Mr. Lackey, who are both good fishermen, kept both parties supplied with fish.

With A. J. Geiger, who arrived here last week, was Miss Essie Geiger, who while Mr. Geiger was attending the summer school at the University in Gainesville, visited relatives in Jasper and north Florida. They were accompanied home by their cousin, Miss Evelyn Lewis, of Jasper, who will remain in St. Cloud for a short visit.

VETERANS ASSOCIATION

The weekly meeting of the Veterans' Association was called to order by Comrade Lathrop and followed by the singing of "America." Prayer was then offered by Comrade Cooley. The reading of the minutes of the last meeting was heard and approved, after which the Florida song and St. Cloud yell came in their usual order.

Mrs. Vreeland announced that Mr. Triplett would give a play in the near future at the G. A. R. Hall. A collection was then taken up and the social hour turned over to the W. C. T. U., with Mrs. Esmeralda Vreeland as the leader. She gave a splendid program, as follows:

"America, the Beautiful," song, by the choir.

"The Strange Cat," reading, by Margaret Dayley.

Duett, "In the Garden," by Caroline and Laurie Cashburn.

"A ride o nthe Train," reading, by Martha Bunday.

Others participating in the program were R. Hartley, Mrs. Benedict, Mrs. Campbell, Mrs. Agnes Livermore, Mrs. Vreeland, and Mrs. Perkins.

The W. C. T. U. then gave the flag salute and the meeting closed by singing the national anthem.

The meeting next week will turn the social hour over to the conductorship of the W. C. T. U., with Mrs. Benedict as chairman.

Josephine Perkins, Secretary.

PRIZES AT HEDRICK'S PARLOR

Hedrick's Billiard Parlor will give away prizes on every Saturday evening amounting to $2.50 in gold to the player receiving a lucky number. Each game a man plays carries with it a number which is given to the winner of the game. These numbers are held to compare with duplicates which are drawn at 10 o'clock each Saturday night and the $2.50 prize awarded to the lucky man.

ALFRED CLEMENS

Alfred Clemens, age 85, died Sunday, August 14, at his home on Illinois avenue and Thirteenth street. Funeral services were held Tuesday, August 16, from the Ebelstein Brothers funeral home. The G. A. R. ritualistic service was used with the Rev. Frank Kenney officiating. Interment was in Mt. Peace cemetery.

ST. CLOUD PLAYERS AT G. A. R. HALL SEPT. 2

Director Triplett announces that rehearsals for the first play to be given by our home dramatic players are progressing in a very satisfactory way and feels that the entire cast will appear to such advantage as to place the organization in a class far removed from the usual home talent Thespians.

"The Missouri Girl," a standard four-act comedy, with a story of deep heart interest and an abundant vein of laughing material will be used as the first vehicle.

A wealth of beautiful special scenery will be employed, a number of musical specialties will be introduced, while the finest music will be in the hands of Mrs. Triplett.

A complete program will appear in these columns next week, together with a scale of admission prices calculated to be within the reach of all.

LUCKY LINDBERG COIN ARRIVES IN ST. CLOUD

A lucky Lindberg coin was received here today by Mr. E. E. Livermore, with the far-famed flying Colonel's picture on one side and the emblem of the Spirit of St. Louis on the other. The emblem shows an airplane flying high in the clouds, with a medallion, comprising clover leaves and the stars and American shield dangling to the plane.

The coin, approximately the size of a fifty dollar gold coin, but made of lighter metal, although gold smelted or gold filled, was sent to Mr. Livermore by a friend, M. J. Schaefer, of Chicago.

When asked to give up the coin for display here, Mr. Livermore laughingly said he would not take $50 in gold for it at the present writing.

WORK IS STARTED ON CHRISTIAN CHURCH

Work began Monday on the new additions to the Christian Church of St. Cloud, the plans of which call for remodeling and enlarging of the church, so that when finished, it will seat 375 to 400 people.

As published in the TRIBUNE before, the Gothic idea of architecture has been adopted and the development of this plan to the successful completion of the edifice will give the city one of its striking pieces of worship.

The matter of enlarging the church has been under discussion for more than a year, due to the increasing membership, and was recently unanimously agreed upon by the official board and members.

It is hoped that the contractors will be able to complete their job in time to accommodate the larger attendance when the winter tourist season arrives.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to extend our thanks and appreciation to all friends, neighbors and anyone who in any way assisted us in the illness and death of Alfred Clemens—to the Ebelstein Bros., Mr. Lindholm, the Post, to Rev. Kenney and to all.

Mrs. Alfred Clemens,
Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Carr,
Mr. and Mrs. Baxter.

CLEAN RAGS WANTED

RELIEF CORPS IN REGULAR SESSION AUGUST 12

Twenty-five members were present when the L. L. Mitchell Relief Corps Number 12 met in regular session here on August 11. President N. Gertrude Balcom occupied the chair. Due to the absence of the official musician, the officers' march was omitted. The roll call found the senior vice-president, as well as the assistant guard, also absent.

Mrs. Flora Norris, being a candidate for admission to the corps, was duly initiated, after which the relief committee reported eighty calls, thirteen bouquets of flowers and 80 cents.

The committee on ice cream and cake reported the collection of $9.00, after which a rising vote was offered Comrade Hugh Perkins for bringing the delicacy over, and also to Mr. Benedict and Comrade A. W. Lathrop for assisting in moving tables and chairs to and from the lawn and to any who in any way rendered other assistance.

Under the discharge of unfinished business from a previous meeting the question of a flag for the new school house was disposed of. The flag was ordered.

It was voted to hold the birthday party for July and August in the Post room after the close of the Post meeting on Friday, August 26. All visiting members of the Post and Corps are cordially invited.

Mrs. A. E. Livermore,
Correspondent.

MICHIGAN ASSOCIATION

An adjourned meeting of the Michigan Association will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Goff, on Wednesday, the 31st. This is to be a picnic, so bring your basket with cups, knives and forks, and teaspoons. Coffee, sugar and milk, will be furnished by the Association. All Michigan people are invited to be with us and help to have a good time.

WILLIS ROGERS

Willis Rogers, age 85, a veteran of the Civil War, was found dead on August 5 at his home on Carolina avenue. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the Ebelstein Bros. funeral home. The G. A. R. service was observed with the Rev. Frank Kenney in charge. Burial was at Mt. Peace.

LON CHANEY SURROUNDED BY FILM FAVORITES

Lon Chaney has the leading role in "When Bearcat Went Dry," the fighting romance of the Kentucky hills to be shown at the Arcade Theatre, Kissimmee, next Thursday. That in itself is enough to insure crowded houses during the picture's engagement. For Chaney's name is a household word, having been made so by his amazing characterizations in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," "The Phantom of the Opera" and scores of other big pictures.

There is additional good news, however, for film fans in the announcement that, with Mr. Chaney, there is to be seen as capable a group of supporting players as has ever been assembled. Included therein we find Vangie Valentine of "Follies" fame, Walt Whitman and Winter Hall, two sterling character artists, Bernard Durning, Lydia Knott, the screen's best-loved mother, and Ed. Brady, an amazingly capable heavy.

ST. CLOUD PICNIC IN OHIO

Further referring to the St. Cloud-Alliance, Ohio, picnic, a brief report of which was published in last week's TRIBUNE, the Alliance REVIEW of Alliance, Ohio, in its issue of July 28, says:

The St. Cloud-Alliance Tourist club's association met for their yearly session Wednesday all day at Silver Park. A splendid picnic dinner was served to 112 at noon.

The business session resulted in the election of the following officers: president, Mrs. Charles Johnson; vice-president, Dan Wilson; secretary, Mrs. J. W. Neville; press correspondent, Mrs. Lina Conrad; treasurer, Mrs. George Rickard.

John Hanchtmarck gave two violin solos, one of them his own composition. Ohio and St. Cloud songs and yells were given. Short speeches were made by R. M. Scrunton, George Rickard, Mrs. L. G. Kelley, Mrs. John Clapsaddle and Mrs. Del Rickard.

Merne Bowers of Ackron was the only "Florida Cracker" present. The members decided to hold the meetings from now on at the home of Charles Johnson, South Union avenue.

CARD OF THANKS

I sincerely thank those who so kindly assisted me after the decease of my Uncle Willis Rogers. Especially the members of the G. A. R. post and those who so kindly contributed flowers at his funeral.

MRS. A. C. HODE HOSTESS

Mrs. A. C. Hode was hostess Friday at a pleasant afternoon bridge party, when six games of bridge were enjoyed. After scores were counted first prize was awarded to Mrs. Howard Dawley and second prize to Mrs. Lilburn Godwin.

The guests were served with fruit salad, ice cream and cake and ice tea.

The bridge guests were Mesdames Pete Sherman, Fred Tuttle, Miller Strayer, Howard Dawley, Lilburn Godwin, J. D. Chunn, Aaron Story and Wm. Crum.

TUESDAY EVENING CLUB

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Armstrong entertained the regular meeting of the Tuesday Evening club at their home on Connecticut avenue this week. At the conclusion of several games of bridge, scores were counted which resulted in high club prize being awarded to H. S. Dawley and second prize to Mrs. Katherine French.

Refreshments served were ice cream, punch and cake.

The members present were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bailey, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Dawley, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Cowgur, Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Crawford, Mrs. Katherine French, Miss Kathleen Goff and Mrs. L. C. Bettinger.

MRS. J. G. MITCHELL ENTERTAINS CLUB

Mrs. J. G. Mitchell of Bunnymede lake, entertained the members of her bridge club on Wednesday afternoon this week.

After the usual number of games, refreshments of angel food cake with whipped cream were served.

The members present to enjoy the afternoon were Mesdames W. T. Adams, A. J. Allsen, Miller Strayer, Fred Tuttle, J. J. Johnston, L. J. Reuhlen, A. B. Wiggiston, H. E. Hedrick, J. D. Chunn, E. O. Ward, H. L. Steen and C. A. Bailey.

PRESBYTERIAN C. E. MEETS

The meeting of the Presbyterian Christian Endeavor will be held at the home of Miss Moore, Sixth and Pennsylvania avenue, Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock.

Be sure to be present, as plans will be made for the picnic August 31.

WORRILL-MILAM

Miss Adine Worrill, of St. Cloud, and G. P. Milam, of Holopaw, were quietly married Wednesday evening by Judge J. W. Oliver at his office in the court house in Kissimmee. Miss Worrill had just returned on Wednesday from visiting in Dayton, Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. Milam are receiving the congratulations of their many friends in St. Cloud. They will make their home in Holopaw.

CONN'S DEPARTMENT STORE SALE IS STILL ON

The sale at the Conn Department store has exceeded the expectations of the management, it was said today, and while a large stock of goods has been moved, there are still many more bargains on the counter.

PALM THEATRE

A very noticeable increase in the number of Palm Theatre patrons during the present week, is fully merited by the excellent picture programs presented.

Tuesday's amateur program drew heavily and as usual supplied an extra added delight. Marvin Perkins, in a costume dance creation, carried away the first prize, while A. S. McKay, Paul Malone, Rudy Jaranek, Eddie Padgett, Dennis and Denton Pitcock, Lucy Abbott, Misses Christine Milon, Leona and Leona Haynes and Helen Holman supplied a varied program of instrumental selections, with much mirth and melody, introducing some clever dancing specialties, all of which were enthusiastically received.

Instead of the usual amateur program next week, a Charleston dancing contest will be held, with $5.00 to be given as the first prize.

Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday have been designated as family nights. On those three dates—Aug. 22, 23 and 24, the entire family, whether it may consist of two or twenty folks, will be admitted on one 50 cent ticket. This certainly is good news for dad.

OSCEOLA COUNTY TO MAKE EXHIBIT AT ORLANDO FAIR

Osceola county will participate in the great annual Mid-Winter Fair at Orlando, to be held next February 21-25, as shown by recent appropriations made by the county commissioners to assist in defraying some of the expenses incident to displays this county will put in at the exhibition.

Being a Central Florida enterprise, the support of Osceola, as well as Seminole county, is encouraging to the new management of the Orlando fair, which is fittingly headed by R. F. Maguire of Orlando.

J. Nathan Bryan, chairman of the Board of Osceola County Commissioners, has been named a director of the Orlando exposition, while County Agricultural agent J. R. Gunn and Home Demonstration agent Miss Albina Smith will work in conjunction with Mr. Bryan in building up a prize winning exhibit for this county.

T. N. HEWITT OF BEL, LA., IS IN ST. CLOUD

Another visitor to St. Cloud who arrived here a few days ago, expresses himself as highly pleased with this section of the state.

He is T. N. Hewitt, a saw mill and lumber man of Bel, Louisiana, who arrived here last Saturday to visit his son, Jack Hewitt, of the Hewitt Lumber Company of St. Cloud, and to remain for a couple of weeks at least.

He has been connected with the J. A. Bel Lumber Company, at Bel, La., for 30 years, but recently, he said, the concern "moved out" and had closed down their mills for good. The closing, however, was due to the fact that the company had passed into the hands of Mr. Bel's widow and his partner's widow, who, being immensely wealthy, were glad to have cut the best of the timber their late husbands had arranged for before their deaths.

Mr. Hewitt was accompanied on his trip from Louisiana by his other son, Mid Hewitt. He said the rice fields of Louisiana had produced a banner crop this year, and a great harvest is approaching for the growers.

CRAWFORD RETURNS FROM DETROIT FACTORY

Mr. H. E. Crawford, owner of the Crawford Electric Shop on Eleventh street, has returned from Detroit, where he has been taking a course in the art of installing and maintaining Copeland refrigerators, the agency for which he has exclusively for Osceola county.

Mr. Crawford said that his study of the Copeland refrigerator was most interesting, and he was full of praise for its up-to-date and simple as well as very economical method of operation.

He was accompanied on his return mothertrip by his son, Richard, and his mother and fatherin-law, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hershey, who will spend the winter in St. Cloud.

"UNCLE JIM" OSBORNE DIES IN WEST VIRGINIA

Word reached this city last Monday to the effect that James Osborne, one of our regular winter residents, passed away at his home in Clendenin, W. Va., on Friday, August 5th. Stomache trouble was the cause of his death.

Mr. Osborne did not feel so strong last winter and had to forego the anticipation of making his annual pilgrimage to Florida. During his last stay here he made a host of friends and spent much of the time fishing. He owned and lived in a most comfortable house on the west side of Kentucky avenue between Seventh and Eighth streets. To mourn his earthly departure he leaves a widow, who regularly accompanied him on all trips.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN That the Board of County Commissioners of Osceola County, Florida, will receive sealed bids up to 10 o'clock A. M. September 12, 1927, for clearing and grubbing 49 acres of right of way on Kenansville-Fellsmere road in said county, being approximately seven and one half miles in length.

Specifications for this road may be obtained from J. L. Overstreet, Clerk of the Board or J. E. Johnson, County Engineer. Certified check for 5% of bid must be submitted therewith. The Board reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

Dated at Kissimmee, Florida, on this August 8th, 1927.

Insurance Companies Pay Out Huge Amounts For Accidents

Imagine, for a moment the amount of money required to erect the great Woolworth Building in New York City. Add to this the cost of the lofty Singer Building. Then, for good measure, throw in the price of the famous Flat Iron Building, and you have a substantial figure—about $25,000,000.

This done, let us think of dividing the $25,000,000 into little stacks—$10 in this one, $25 in that, $75.50 here, $225 there, $800 in that pile, $1745 here, $2000 there, $3,100 over in that corner, $4,000 in this one, and so on. Finished, we have 214,378 stacks of money totalling $25,575,480.96.

There is no mystery about this big figure. It represents the total amount paid out by the Aetna Life Insurance Company in accident claims since it has been writting this form of protection. The little stacks, 214,378 of them, are the individual claims.

Falls head the list. There were 50,102 of them; they cost $4,693,806. They occured on pavements, on stairways, from ladders, on stairways, from ladders, through trap doors, from beds, in bathtubs, over inanimate objects, and in many other ways. Pavement falls were the most numerous, also most expensive. They totaled 22,273, cost $1,845,396.

Travel accidents, not including automobiles, numbered 15,302 and drew on the company treasury to the extent of $3,225,147. These include street car accidents ,railroad wreck, steamboat disasters.

Automobile accidents, while not so numerous as spills and falls, were somewhat more expensive. They numbered 26,011, cost $3,847,291.

Accidents chargeable to sports and recreations numbered 13,473 and rolled up a money total of $1,019,557. Almost everyone engages in some form of outdoor sport, but even the croquet players are not safe, it seems, for the records show this mild old game to have been responsible for numerous sprained ankles, wrenched backs, broken shins and falls over wickets.

Riding and driving horses are far from impotent as the cause of accidents. Latest figures disclose that 12,299 injuries, costing the company $1,212,052, have been reported. Under this classification are included injuries received from carriages and wagons, from kicks, from falling off saddle horses, from having the feet stepped on. Also 2,367 playful steeds took 2,367 bites from 2,367 human anatomies. The humor was all on the horses' side.

There are many other classifications into which the company's accident records are divided. Cuts from hand tools, for example, caused 11,793 injuries for which payment of $522,973 was made. Burns and scalds were responsible for 6,807 injuries; splinters connected with 1,521 persons; elevators injured 697; firearms laid 1,280 persons low; flying or falling objects struck 2,628 assured; miscellaneous and septic wounds were suffered by 15,005 persons, who collected $1,572,249 from the company.

In considering these figures, we must remember, of course, that they represent accidents only to those who carried insurance. They would be multiplied many times if the uninsured public were included.

CITRUS PLANS TO BE DISCUSSED AT ORLANDO

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Aug. 4.—The citrus clearing house plan for Florida, which has been formed during the past few weeks, will be discussed by Hon. Nathan Mayo, Commissioner of Agriculture, and V. R. Newton, president of the Fruitman's Club, Orlando, at the Farmers' Week program, Wednesday, August 10.

This plan has been worked out by officials of the Fruitman's Club and Commissioner Mayo, with the cooperation and approval of Hon. W. M. Jardine, Secretary of Agriculture, in an effort to solve one of the knottiest problems which has beset the Florida citrus industry in recent years. Its success should yield much to the citrus industry of Florida.

Several plans have been suggested and discussed before one satisfactory to all concerned has been found. This final plan will be discussed and explained by Commissioner Mayo and Mr. Newton in the auditorium of the University of Florida at the Farmers' Week general session, Wednesday morning, August 10.

"This plan is one of the most important things to come before Florida citrus growers in recent years, and we hope that many growers will be present at the Farmers' Week session Wednesday when it is discussed," says Dr. Wilmon Newell, dean of the College of Agriculture and director of the Agricultural Extension Division. "A splendid citrus program has been arranged for the entire week, and growers who cannot stay all week should by all means be present on Wednesday."

DISINFECT TRUCK SEED BEFORE PLANTING

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—Truck crop seed should be disinfected before they are planted, to prevent seed-borne diseases, says Dr. C. F. Weber, associate pathologist of the Florida Experiment Station. The best disinfectant to use for this purpose is corrosive sublimate, 1 to 1,000. This disinfectant can be purchased at local drug stores, in the form of either crystals or tablets—crystals for large quantities and tablets for small quantities.

It should be dissolved in warm water. Where a large quantity is wanted, one ounce of crystals dissolved in 2½ gallons of water will give the desired strength of 1 to 1,000. For small quantities, one tablet should be dissolved in a pint of water. Make the volume of disinfectant about three times the volume of seed to be treated.

The solution should be made up in crocks or wooden containers—never in metal. It is best to use fresh solution with each batch of seed. Corrosive sublimate is a deadly poison.

Seed to be treated should be tied loosely in a thin cloth bag and submerged in the solution. They should be stirred occasionally to loosen air bubbles. After they have been soaked they should be removed from the solution, rinsed in several changes of clear water, and spread out to dry in the shade. Be careful not to spread where they will become re-infected by disease spores. As soon as dry, the seed are ready to plant.

Truck crop seed should be soaked according to the following schedule, with especial emphasis on the time:

Cabbage, cauliflower, kohl-rabi mustard, rutabagas and turnips, 15 minutes; cantaloupes, cucumbers, gourds and watermelons, 10 minutes; tomato, pepper and eggplant, 8 minutes.

WINTER FLORIDA IS WALL STREET, BARRON WRITES

By Elmer E. Paine

Miami and Palm Beach constitute the "Winter Wall Street" not of New York city alone, but of all America.

Here on the southeastern Atlantic coast are gathered controlling representatives of the really great financial and industrial power of the nation.

If an investigator desires intimate personal information and accurate knowledge of the economics, finances, manufactures, mines, railroads and steamships of the country or, broadly, of the banking, commercial and trade conditions of America, here, per force, he must come in the winter season to make his inquiries, because here scores of the leaders of big business are enjoying themselves in a marvelous environment, but keeping in closet touch, at the same time, with the crucial economic affairs of the world.

Clarence W. Barron, distinguished editor, publicist, financier and statesman, has written for his Wall Street Journal a notable article in which he refers to Miami and Palm Beach as the "Winter Wall Street" and discusses "financial gatherings in Florida."

Mr. Barron is one of the ablest and staunchest friends of southern Florida and his comments and news concerning the state always are constructive and interesting. He expresses supreme confidence in both the present and future of Florida, but dwells particularly upon Miami and Palm Beach, his article being written during a brief sojourn in the latter city.—Miami Daily News.

FLORIDA HAS 28,000 MILES OF PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

JACKSONVILLE, Fla.—Florida is building highways rapidly. It is almost impossible to say from day to day what the mileage of hardsurfaced roads is, says the Florida State chamber of commerce. The designated state highway system prior to the recent legislative session was 5,654 miles but this was increased somewhat by special acts taking additional roads into the general scheme.

Altogether, according to the State Road Department, Florida possesses approximately 28,000 miles of highways, as nearly as can be determined. Of the strictly state system, 2,735 miles had been hardsurfaced by the first of this year but during the last seven months many miles of new road have been completed. The counties have hardsurfaced another 2,300 miles, in round figures, giving Florida, in state and county roads, approximately 5,000 miles of hardsurfaced highways at this time. To this may be added another 4,500 miles of improved earth roads, which includes the excellent sand clay highways in West Florida, Lake County and elsewhere, and the hard-pan dirt roads in various sections of the state. Some of these earth roads are the "fastest" highways in the state for motor cars and it means, therefore, that Florida now has approximately 9,500 miles of highway over which automobiles may be driven at high speed.

To December 31, 1926, the State Road Department had expended in construction and maintenance of roads and bridges—the expenditures being confined solely to the designated State system—a total of $41,791,491.

During the two years up to April 1, the State's investment in highways and bridges represented $22,129,165—this does not take into account county expenditures. It included the construction of 526.57 miles of completed roads of various types, 20,485 lineal feet of bridges, and the building of 718 miles of grade for surfacing.

Every one of the sixty-seven county seats in the state except Lake Butler, in Union County, may be reached over a high-speed road and even Lake Butler will be accessible over such a highway within the next few months through completion of that section of State Road No. 28 now under construction between that point and Lake City. In South Florida, it is possible to visit every community of one thousand population or more between Ocala and Sanford on the north and Fort Myers and Miami to the south in a run of 1,000 miles with the necessity of "doubling" over less than 30 miles of highway. The entire tour can be made over hardsurfaced roads.

HOW TO TREAT FOR ROUP TO SAVE CHICKENS

GAINESVILLE, Fla.—Roup or contagious catarrah in chicken is most prevalent during summer months. The disease is caused by an organism which has not yet been isolated.

The first symptom of the disease is the appearance of a thin, watery discharge coming from the nasal passages and eyes, says Dr. A. L. Shealy, veterinarian of the Experiment Station. Within two or three days the discharge becomes thicker and pus may be present. Finally, the nasal passage becomes greatly congested and the pus discharge so abundant that these passages are occluded. Likewise the eyes become swollen and the pus discharge so extensive that the eyes are closed and even the lids may be glued together by the accumulated discharge. In such cases the eyes becomes greatly swollen, the eye ball becomes opaque and is often even destroyed. The sinuses or cavities just below the eyes become infected and filled with pus, which later produces a cheesy exudate within these cavities. The dwellings on the side of the head may sometimes become as large as a small hickory nut.

Treatment consists in separating the sick birds from the healthy ones. All birds should receive potassium permanganate solution as drinking water. Add one third of a teaspoonful of potassium permanganate to each gallon of drinking water.

The solution should be kept only in glass, earthen, or granite containers, since it will corrode metallic utensils and may thereby poison the birds.

The diseased birds should be treated by bathing the affected parts with some antiseptic solution such as a saturated solution of boric acid, hydrogen peroxide solution, or a solution containing permanganate of potash 2 drams in water one pint. The eyes should be treated by bathing them with a saturated boric acid solution, then adding a few drops of a 15 percent solution of argyrol. If there are large swellings under the eyes, these areas may be opened with a clean knife, the cheesy exudate removed and the cavity washed with one of the antiseptic solutions mentioned above.

The premises should be kept as clean as possible. Burn all old loose boards and litter which might be present and spray liberally with a good disinfectant solution as creolin, lysol, carbolic acid, etc. Burn or bury deeply all birds which die of the disease.

HOLDERS OF EVERGLADES LANDS WILL PAY TAXES SAYS EXPERT

An illuminating resume of the everglades situation was made late last week in Jacksonville by George B. Hills, civil engineer, president of the Jacksonville Chamber of Commerce and who was a member of the Everglades Board of Review, which board has done such excellent work in behalf of everglades reclamation.

As presented, Mr. Hill went on record as heartily favoring the present plan as a forward step in the reclamation of everglades lands, and further on, explained how the undertaking could be successfully carried out.

Admitting that many adverse, complex and diverse problems confront the engineers who are to undertake the greater work now contemplated through the proposed $10,000,000 bond issue, Mr. Hills pointed out that Lake Okeechobee, lying well down the peninsula of Florida, is the downward-stream terminus of the Kissimmee river, Fisheating Creek, Taylor Creek and other minor streams of relatively minor importance.

"The waters flowing off from a total of approximately 4,176 square miles or 2,670,000 acres of land," he said, "including an area extending north of Kissimmee and almost to Orlando, are delived in to the lake by these streams. The lake also receives the flood time discharge from approximately 300 square miles of land adjacent to its southern shore."

For the foregoing reason, Mr. Hill said the first step must be taken with a view of curbing the waters of Lake Okeechobee itself, because the everglades area actually comprises a board and typical Florida marsh which served as the natural outlet for Lake Okeechobee. Hence, the protection of that marsh against the lake waters evidently became a first requirement for its reclamation.

Mr. Hills did not leave his subject there, but went pertinently into what appeared to be well-based ideas concerning the achievement.

"Protection can best be accomplished by the construction of a levee around the south end of the lake or the upper end of the marsh, for the purpose of holding the lake waters back from the marsh lands; and by the construction of an outlet canal to be built from the lake, along the most economical line to an outlet in tide-water, and large enough to accommodate the flood discharge from the lake.

"When the control of the lake is accomplished by the construction of adequate facilities as described above," he said, "the everglades lands are then relieved from inundation by lake waters originating through the central peninsula of Florida, and the reclamation of the lands then becomes a logical problem involving the construction of canals in locations and of dimensions such as to furnish the required degree of drainage.

"Up to the present time some $15,000,000 have been spent in works of the nature described above. A levee around the south end of the lake and an outlet canal discharging into the ocean by way of the St. Lucie river at Stuart have both been constructed. Neither are as yet built to the dimensions necessary to afford complete protection under extreme storm and rain conditions and their further enlargement is necessary. Certain main drainage canals have been already constructed, but the construction of many more is necessary before main or arterial drainage will be available to all of the everglades lands.

"The policy of the drainage district is and has been to provide the the works necessary for the control of Lake Okeechobee and necessary to furnish arterial or main drainage canal outlets for the everglades lands, in the expectation that sub-drainage districts will be organized by interested land owners for the purpose of providing the detail lateral drainage necessary to afford complete agricultural drainage to particular individual tracts.

"The Everglades Engineering Board of Review estimates that the provision for adequate facilities for control of Lake Okeechobee and of a complete system or main drainage canals with appurtenant works necessary to accommodate approximately 2,000,000 acres of everglades lands will require the further expenditure of approximately $25,000,000."

Mr. Hills said, on the other hand, that the reclamation of 2,000,000 acres at one time would tend to get the market and indicated that an orderly process of making available smaller parcels, is the best policy. It insures better results in every respect, he pointed out. And "fortunately," he said, "the engineering plan for the reclamation . . . at a rate demanded and justified by actual agricultural utilization of the lands . . . under an orderly program of progressive development . . . is entirely possible. The capital investment, he said, would, at all times be kept on a parity with the actual utilization of the lands reclaimed. The fact of that possibility is of utmost importance to the project, for it eliminates the necessity of a large capital investment upon which no return can be had for a long period of time."

During Mr. Hill's address he declared that holders of lands in the everglades and not the state would bear the burden of the $10,000,000 bond issue, citing the fact that the I. I. Board trustees owned about one-sixth of the area embraced in the project.

MONUMENT HONORS BULL RIDING SMITH

PARIS—When the first and original "Smith" to emigrate to the United States was captured by Indians on Long Island they set him on a wild bull and told him that if he fell off he would be killed. If, on the other hand, he stuck on they would present him with all the land he could comfortably ride around. So goes the old legend.

Smith stayed on the bull and rode around the considerable tract which is now Smithtown, N. Y. Several thousand descendants, living in Smithtown, thought the process of their famous ancestor should be perpetuated in bronze and commissioned Charles Cary Rumsey, American sculptor, to do the monument.

Rumsey finished it just before his death in 1922, and the wild bull which the sculptor chose as a symbol is now one of the exhibits in the retrospective exhibition of the Rumsey sculptures forming part of the salon of the National Fine Arts society at the Grand Palais.

The National Dentists' Association is told that there are only 20 sets of perfect natural teeth in all of America which indicates that the dental business is a howling big success.

What Is a Diuretic?

People Are Learning the Value of Occasional Use.

EVERYONE knows that a laxative stimulates the bowels. A diuretic performs a similar function to the kidneys. Under the strain of our modern life, our organs are apt to become sluggish and require assistance. More and more people are learning to use Doan's Pills, occasionally, to insure good elimination which is so essential to good health. More than 50,000 grateful users have given Doan's signed recommendations. Scarcely a community but has its representation. Ask your neighbor!

TOBACCO GROWERS ARE PROSPERING IN GEORGIA

Reports from 20 of the larger warehouses in Georgia indicate that state will produce this year the largest tobacco crop in its history. The early harvest is already moving to the markets and satisfactory prices are being realized.

Since the boll weevil began making such inroads on cotton, the farmers have turned to the growing of tobacco and further reports state that many of the producers, who were badly involved when they turned from cotton to tobacco are now out of debt.

COMMISSIONERS INLAND WATERWAY HOLD SESSION

MELBOURNE, July 20.—Eight of the eleven newly appointed commissioners of the East Coast inland navigation district met at the Harbor City hotel, Eau Gallie, this morning. They were Frank R. Owens, Jacksonville, Duval county; A. D. Taylor, St. Augustine, St. Johns county; D. F. Fuquay, Bunnell, Flagler county; Chas. F. Burgman, Daytona Beach, Volusia county; John O. Shares, Eau Gallie, Brevard county; A. W. Young, Vero Beach, Indian River county; Stanley Kitchen, Stuart, Martin county; A. H. Brook, Ft. Lauderdale, Broward county. F. C. McMullen, Fort Pierce, and D. H. Conkling of West Palm Beach were on vacations. E. G. Sewell, Dade county, was unable to serve.

Senator Taylor, acting as temporary chairman, listened to discussion which led to a decision that legal formalities would take a couple of weeks before permanent organization could be completed.

Careful consideration of engineering finance and legal matters including the survey of a bill forming the navigation district, were carried out. Judge Shares acted as host at luncheon to the commissioners, newspaper representatives and experts in attendance.

During the afternoon a meeting of the inland waterways committee of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Brevard county, listened to an exhaustive consideration of the proposed inlet, in executive session.

THE LEADING CHARACTERS

EDISON FORBES, a young resident of Scottdale, goes on a little joy ride with another fellow. Some liquor is consumed. They are stopped suddenly by the sight of a booze truck driven by SCOTTS LIBBEY, a worthless character, who has smashed his machine into another car, killing its lone occupant, a woman. Forbes' companion and Libbey quit the scene hurriedly, leaving the former alone to face a constable who reasons that Eddie, with the scent of whiskey about him, must be connected in some way with the accident. Accordingly, Forbes is arrested.

PATSY JANE, Eddie's pretty wife, agrees that public sentiment runs too high against him. Accordingly they migrate up north to some land that has been in the family for years. Settled in their log cabin

ISAIAH SEALMAN, a neighbor, puts the Forbes a trial and indicates that there are some back taxes for the young couple to pay. Sealman offers to give Eddie a job after he goes down to Long Portage, a nearby town, and learns about the taxes.

The next day while walking about their property they discover a mysterious mound that contains outcrops similar to salt. At the tax office Forbes learns that the back taxes amount to over eight hundred dollars and that the certificates are held by a Chicago capitalist who is eager to obtain the property. Eddie has five months to pay. A few days later he helps a booze truck out of the mud and is presented with a bottle of whiskey which he hides before walking over to interview Sealman.

CHAPTER IX

An Offer

Sealman was not at home, a woman of middle age who answered his knock told Eddie. He was downtown. She looked at him with the curiosity of people, one who see few strangers. He could feel her eyes boring into his back from the small-paned windows after he had turned away and was retracing his steps.

Now what to do! he thought dissatisfedly. There was plenty of wood cut. He didn't want to coop up and read. There was nothing else, except an exploratory tramp. That was it: He would follow the road north, to find out where the booze truck came from.

He stopped of the house to tell Pat and then turned into the sinuous double track, along which the broad tires had left their impress. When he was opposite the point where the liquor was hidden, he turned to the jutting rock and thrust his arm into the hole.

He withdrew the flask and thrust it into his pocket without looking at it. He swung northward for a mile without pausing. Then he stopped abruptly, snatching out the bottle, removed the cork with feverish haste and took a long drink.

The liquor was potent. He coughed and shuddered, but the effect of the stimulant was immediate. A genial glow coursed through his veins. He became optimistic. He whistled lightheartedly as he fell into a distance-eating stride that took him due north.

Mile after mile was reeled off, for he was determined to find the end of the road. The soil was so poor that there were no settlers, no human habitation—nothing but the track, dipping into the hollow and surmounting the long sandy knolls with sparse jack-pine covering.

He stopped occasionally to drink again. The exercise kept the effects of the whiskey down. At last, long past mid-afternoon, Lake Huron, cold and gray, under the assault of the rain, broke on his vision. The lake filled the entire horizon ahead. The road ended at a dock which thrust itself into the shallows. Fretful wavelets broke upon white sand. Pines of good size fringed the shores of the cove.

"They lighter it from out there a ways", was Eddie's thought. "The steamers shoot right across the lake from the Georgian Bay country. They run the booze-trucks day and night up here. But as they get down where there are more towns, they must lay up days."

He took out the bottle again. His gestations had reduced the contents considerably. The stuff was beginning to take effect. "Well, another little drink won't do us any harm," he said aloud with a reckless laugh. "And I guess it's time to hit homeward then. It's a long, long ways to little old Tipperary down there by the creek.

"It's a long, long way to Tipperary," he sang, unsteadiness creeping into his footsteps.

Darkness had fallen when he slumped against the door of the cabin. The raincoat had impeded him. Somewhere back along the trail he had thrown it away. So that it was a drenched figure that toppled to the floor when Patsy Jane lifted the latch.

She got him undressed and to bed, somehow, lips compressed, eyes glowing with resentful inner fires. He was inert as a log. He slept the night through, without moving. Really it was more of a stupor than of sleep, for the liquor had the effect on his senses of a shrewdly-swung mallet.

He was sick next day, sick with a sense of failure and remorse and worthlessness, but physically ill as well. The exposure to th cold rain itself was a venomous drug. The adulterants which had been added to give bite and volume by the various bandlers bantered on deadly poisons and they clawed and tore at stomach and intestinal linings.

It was not until the second morning, after he had eaten breakfast in a dressing gown, that Patsy steeled herself against the pity which kept welling up at sight of pale face. She had treated him uncomplainingly, ignoring his fretful repinings and self-scourgings.

"Now, Eddie," she said gravely, across the breakfast-table, "we'll have a little talk. I'm not going to say much. Nagging won't do any good. But we must have an understanding."

She hesitated before going on: "I don't need to tell you what liquor does for you. You know where it brought you—where you'd be if it weren't for the governor. Eddie, I won't stand any more. I can't stand any more. This is the last time. If you get drunk again I'll leave you"

He searched the sad, piquant little face. The gray eyes were steady, the tender mouth firm. The finality of her words struck a chill in his heart. "But, Patsy! What would I do if you left me?" he burst forth, involuntarily, and then flushed at the childish selfishness of the remark.

"I don't know, Eddie. It might cure you. I can't seem to cure you by staying." There was not bitterness in her words; only sadness.

He leaned forward to take her hands. "You won't have to go, Pat," he assured her, his voice trembling with eagerness. "I'm through with booze! Oh, I know I've said it before, but this time I mean it. You'll see. Never another drop as long as I live." He meant it. He was sure of himself. The chains were broken. The conviction that he was his own man shone in his eyes. She thrilled with faith and conviction. She squeezed his hands joyfully.

There was a knock at the door. Sealman, the sleek, stood in a background of brilliant sunshine when Patsy Jane opened it. "What's the matter, Mr. Forbes—sick?" he asked, his keen blue eyes roving as he took a chair.

"A little under the weather," returned Eddie, shortly. "I was over to see the other day, but you were out."

"Yes. You have looked up the taxes, I suppose. What did you find?"

"Well, I have better than eight hundred dollars to raise in five months. That job you talked about begins to look pretty good, Mr. Sealman."

Sealman considered his hands folded over his rounded stomach, his lips pursed beneath his glossy beard. "Rather a lot of money," he said meditatively. "Have you ever considered selling?"

"O, yes, we've talked it some," replied Eddie. "But I don't suppose it would bring much more than the taxes—the whole thing."

"It isn't worth any more," agreed Sealman. "That is, it isn't worth any more to anyone except possibly myself. I wouldn't mind owning this quarter-section. It would round out my property nicely. I could run stock on it after it was fenced. You consider an offer?"

Eddie looked at his wife. Her face did not reveal her thoughts, but he knew that beneath the surface, she disapproved. The idea of selling was repugnant. "I'll listen," he said, noncommittally.

"Well, the actual value is perhaps a thousand dollars. It might bring that if you had time to search for a buyer and interest the right party. Not a cent more. And it might take a year to find your man. Suppose I advance the money to satisfy the taxes, and give you a thousand dollars besides?"

A thousand dollars! The offer was surprisingly generous. It meant that Sealman considered the place worth practically twice what the average person would pay. Well, if it was worth more than eighteen hundred dollars to Sealman, it must be worth that to them.

"I don't believe I care to sell," he said, and Patsy Jane's eyes telegraphed approval.

CHAPTER X

Another Truck

Sealman showed his disappointment. "That's a good price, Mr. Forbes, a big price. You won't get another such offer."

"Maybe not."

"You've admitted that there's a chance you can't raise the taxes. You may lose everything."

"That's a chance I mean to take," returned Eddie, smiling. He felt better that he refusal was behind him.

"Hem." Sealman digested this for a time. "I'm not justified Mr. Forbes, not justified at all. In fact, I'm probably foolish for doing it. But I might raise it to twelve hundred."

"No, thank you."

Sealman rose. Displeasure was struggled to show through the sleekness of his manner. "Fifteen hundred! That's positively the last word, Forbes."

"No Mr. Sealman. I think I can make it worth that by keeping it."

The roving blue eyes encountered Eddie's for an instant. "Anyone else been making you an offer?"

"No. I haven't talked with another soul about it. By the way, how about that job? Does it look as though you could take me on as a farm-hand?"

Sealman paused at the door and turned, his hand on the latch. "I've changed my plans somewhat, Forbes. I don't see how I can use you. Good day."

"Why, the old hoptoad!" ejaculated Eddie. "What's gotten into him? I be sure because we wouldn't sell, or what?"

"I don't know, but I'm glad we didn't," returned Patsy Jane stoutly. "I don't like him any better than you do, Eddie. I'm glad you're not to work for him. What did he mean when he asked if anyone else tried to buy the place?"

"He meant that he's mighty anxious to get it. We haven't heard the last of him, Pat. Well, we'll have to jump in and pull it out of the fire. If he wants it and Brower want it, there must be more to it than we realized. I can get a job, easy, I know."

His optimism was not justified. Most of the settlers in the vicinity had little good land, and that was ill-cultivated. They preferred hunting and fishing and getting outposts to farming, for which they had neither capital nor equipment.

When he crossed the creek, however, there was a ray of hope. The Davenant ranch, plaything of a wealthy Detroiter, had a resident foreman. He told Eddie that the owner had ambitious plans for the year in the way of heavy planting and much clearing. He might need severe men. When Mr. Davenant came up in a week or so, and made final decision, he had better be on hand.

Eddie felt that he could not afford to wait even a week. He went to town. But Long Portage was overflowing with labor. The married men who had been in the woods all winter were trooping back. Their summer jobs were kept for them. There was no chance for an outsider against their long-established claims.

The week passed dully. He dug and chopped out pine stumps, for their roots and pitchy knots made excellent firewood. The hard labor of sawing and chopping smothered his homesickness and drowned in fatigue the craving for liquor which was ever near the fore.

He filled the woodshed to the eaves and even piled a tier around the inside of the garage, a slab shed with sloping roof. He made three trips to the Davenant ranch. But the owner had not yet arrived.

Another rainy day found him chinking the logs of the cabin with mud from the banks of the creek. I did not really need it. But restlessness was devouring him, and the demand for liquor was rising like a prairie fire. The intensity of the passion frightened him. Back home, in normal surroundings and with a regular occupation, he had been able to keep it somewhat within bounds. Especially as the little town and its uncompromising opinions imposed restraints upon him.

But here the frontier still, where life was much more open and simple, the restraints were fewer. The wilderness, grim and unfriendly in storm, gay and sparkling in sunshine, invited one to live his own life, unearing. There were few to see and to comment. It was, he fancied, like the early days in the west. Some of the settlers here were failures who had come to the jack-pine country to forget the past. They did not ask too-personal questions. Because they would resent such questions from others.

Just after noon, while he was at the creek for sodden earth, there was a hail fro mthe north road. He recognized the guard of the liquor-truck whom he had assisted when it was mired. "Got a big wrenched?" asked the man. "The nut's worked loose on this axle and one of our hind wheels was about ready to drop off when we noticed. Don't know what he is thinking of, but hasn't a wrench in his toolkit."

"Just a minute," replied Eddie. He brought the wrench from the cabin and, with a tumultuous admixture of feeling, accompanied the man up the road to the truck. It was but the work of a few moments to twist the nut home on the jacked-up wheel. When it was done the guard, with a knowing smile, reached for the box under the seat, but Eddie stopped him.

"Not for mine," he said. "The last bottle nearly put me away. I think it had arsenic in it!"

"But this is good stuff," assured Jake eagerly. "This is a little private stock we keep for ourselves and our friends. We were all out last week."

"All right, kid, it's up to you," said the guard, when Eddie refused again. "She's clearin' off. Come on and take a little ride."

Eddie responded to the invitation. He did want to do something besides fight his own thoughts. He would ride a few miles toward town drop off, and walk back through the barrens, which were beginning to exercise a powerful fascination for him. Of course he wouldn't drink any of their beastly liquor.

While the truck went on, to wait for him below the ridge west of the house, he ran in to tell Patsy Jane. "Go ahead; it'll do you good," she urged. And then she added: "Who are your friends?"

"Oh, a couple of fellows I met awhile ago," he said evasively, as he kissed her.

The booze-runners proved to be entertaining companions. They took it for granted that he was a kindred spirit, and they spoke freely and with humor, of their calling—its dangers, its adventures, its sordid tangle of plot and counterplot.

The first time they produced a bottle and drank from it, he refused their invitation to join; and the second but the third time he succumbled to their urging to "take just a sip" Which was only the start.

Notice is hereby given, to all whom it may concern, that on the 16th day of September, A. D. 1927, I shall apply to the Honorable J. W. Oliver, Judge of said Court, as Judge of Probate, for a final discharge as Administrator of the estate of Mary A. Lewis Reynolds, deceased; and that at the same time I will present to said Court my final accounts as Administrator of said estate; and ask for their approval.

Dated July 11, A. D. 1927.

L. T. PAXSON,
47-01 Administrator.

NOTICE

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Public Instruction of Osceola County at the office of Sam Brammer, Superintendent, Courthouse, Kissimmee, Fla., until 10 o'clock a. m. Friday, September 2nd, 1927, for the completion of the basement rooms of the addition to the St. Cloud High School.

Specifications will be available at the office of the Architects, Lockwood & Hillis, 801 Forsythe Building, Atlanta, Ga.

Proposals will be considered only from individuals, firms, or corporations possessing satisfactory financial and technical ability and who have established a record for doing satisfactory work of such character.

A certificate check for 3 per cent of the amount of each bid shall accompany the proposal, and said check shall be made payable to Osceola County Board of Public Instruction for Osceola County. Checks are to be treated as liquidated damages in case the bidder or bidders receiving the award of the contract fail to execute the contract and furnish satisfactory bond within 10 days after notification of acceptance of the bid. Bid bonds will not be acceptable.

The Contractor to whom work is awarded shall furnish a satisfactory surety Company's Bond for the full amount of the contract, and the bonding Company must be one doing business in the State of Florida.

The owner reserves the right to reject any and all bids submitted and to waive all formalities.

SAM BRAMMAR
Superintendent and Secretary, Board of Public Instruction for Osceola County.

NOTICE OF ADMINISTRATOR'S PETITION TO TAKE POSSESSION OF LAND TO PAY DEBTS.

In County Judge's Court of Osceola County, State of Florida.

In the matter of the estate of Frederick C. Mason, deceased.

To J. C. Woolhouse, St. Cloud, Florida; Edgar M. Skinner, Columbiaville, Mich.; Ira Elliot, Orion, Mich.; Horace Arms, Lapeer, Mich.; Samuel Arms, Hunter's Creek, Mich.; Frederick Arms, LaPeer, Mich.; and to the unknown heirs at law of Maria Cox, deceased, who live in England, and to all other persons interested in the following described land in Osceola County, State of Florida: Lot 9 of Block 72 in the town of St. Cloud, in said Osceola county:

Notice is hereby given that J. C. Woolhouse as the Administrator of the estate of Frederick C. Mason, deceased, has this day filed his petition in the said County Judge's Court praying for an order from said Court authorizing him as such administrator to take possession of the interest of said deceased in the above described land for the purpose of paying the debts of said estate, on the ground that the personal property belonging to said estate is insufficient to pay said debts.

This is therefore to notify you and each of you to appear before said County Judge's Court at the Court House in Kissimmee, Florida, on the 8th day of September, 1927, to show cause, if any why said petition should not be granted.

Witness my hand and the seal of said Court, at Kissimmee, Florida, this July 26th, 1927.

Now Leading in Republican "Booming"

Above, Former-Gov. Frank O. Lowden of Illinois and Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, who now enjoy the biggest booms for the Republican Presidential nomination. The third hefty boom for former Secretary of State, Charles Evans Hughes, was nipped early by Mr. Hughes himself, who declines to allow his name to be considered.

"Said It Sincerely"

by Arthur Brisbane

Millions of people have puzzled and still are puzzling over President Coolidge's twelve word announcement: "I do not choose to run for the Presidency in Nineteen Twenty-eight."

Many have decided it means, "I am not seeking re-election in Nineteen Twenty-eight. I do not choose it, but if the people nominate me I shall not refuse."

The President's meaning to this writer seems just the opposite and absolutely clear. Selecting his words admirably, he says, "I could be re-elected in Nineteen Twenty-eight if I choose, but I do not choose. I have been elected once. I am entitled to a second election. There is no third election or third term question involved. No candidate could beat me for the Republican nomination. No Democrat could beat me at the polls, but I DO NOT CHOOSE TO RUN."

Nearly a year ago at the White House, when a second election was mentioned by this writer, the President said, "That is hardly a friendly suggestion." The President felt that if he carried his load until March, 1929, he would deserve a rest.

He has told that to members of his Cabinet. Secretaries Mellon and Hoover had recently told the writer on separate occasions that public opinion would practically compel the President to run for a second election. President Coolidge shut his mouth a little tighter than usual and said nothing, which he does with ease.

What if the Republican convention should nominate Coolidge on the first ballot. His action in the case might depend on happenings between now and next July. President Coolidge will not shirk plain duty or set his wishes above those of the people, but when he said "I do not choose to run" he said that he did not want a second nomination and said it sincerely.

PRESBYTERIAN AID SOCIETY MEETS NEXT TUESDAY

The Presbyterian Aid Society will hold its regular meeting in the form of a picnic at the home of Mrs. Logan Ellis, on the Alligator Lake road next Tuesday, August 23. They leave the church at eleven o'clock.

Anyone with cars they can use or anyone wishing to ride must be on time.

Participants are requested to bring something to add to dinner, as well as silver and dishes.

These picnics have been greatly enjoyed, and the Tuesday gathering is expected to outrival previous ones.

The society extends a cordial welcome to all.

ORDER EASTERN STAR TO CELEBRATE MORRIS DAY

All local and visiting members of the O. E. S. are urged to attend the Robert Morris Day picnic at the bathhouse, Thursday afternoon, August 25. Cars will be at the Hunter Arms Hotel at three o'clock for those who have no other way to go.

Bring a covered dish and plain sandwiches with table service for your family. Coffee and cold drinks will be sold by the bathhouse manager.

An interesting program has been prepared by the committee in charge. Kissimmee chapter will join with St. Cloud chapter on this occasion.

SALE AT PERSON'S FRIDAY, SATURDAY AND MONDAY

The Person's Store, on New York avenue, south of 11th street, has put on a special sale of high grade goods for Friday, Saturday and Monday.

Those who know the high quality ladies' apparel carried by the Persons store here will find it worth while to inspect the garments to be offered, as, according to the management, "they will be placed on the counter at extremely low figures."

Pat Johnston, Kissimmee lawyer, and Robert Donegan, of Narcoosee, returned home last Saturday from a trip to Cuba.

Mr. John B. Curlin, the efficient postmaster of St. Cloud, left last Saturday for Kentucky, where he will spend his vacation with his father at Greensboro.

Ex-Congressman Haines, of Altamonte Springs, is going to be a candidate for governor in the general election, on a wet platform. That's pretty slippery business.

LAST MAN'S CLUB HOLDS ITS LAST MEETING

A virile assemblage, mingled with bravery and pathos, and reminiscent of an age gone by, was held at the little city of Stillwater, Minn., on July 21, when three men, the remnant of "The Last Man's Club" met and disbanded forever. They were civil war veterans, the only three left out of a club of 34, who fought in the famous Company B, First Minnesota, at the battle of Bull Run.

In reporting the fade of the club the National Tribune says:

Bent by the withering advance of time, but bright of eye, three Civil War veterans July 21 faced 31 vacant and pall-draped chairs, symbolic of departed comrades, and conducted the final meeting of the Last Man's Club.

Remnant of Co. B, 1st Minn., the gallant trio fronted alone, while Mrs. "Sam" Bloomer, widow of the Color Bearer of that Civil War company, moved about the table to minister to their needs.

Peter Hall, 89, came from Atwater, Minn., and Charles Lockwood, 85, from Chamberlain, S. Dak., while John S. Goff, 84, had journeyed over from St. Paul to meet as they had always met, on the anniversary of the Battle of Bull Run.

They came out of the Civil War dashing heroes of that memorable engagement, bright-eyed and happy, and the greyed little woman of today was then a slip of a girl, soon a bride of one of their number.

Down through the narrow corridor of time, they had come, their ranks diminishing with the years, until they stood, a tottering trio and a wistful-eyed aged lady, facing life's last doorway.

They met for the last time as the organization formed 42 years ago by the Co. B. veterans, and a bottle of Burgundy wine, held in sacred trust for those 42 years, was opened and a last toast said to that once gallant company.

At their first meeting, long years ago, the 34 members had planned that the bottle of wine should stand unopened to the last man—the last survivor of their group to meet as the three met today—and alone drink a toast to his departed comrades.

But this task, they decided last year, would be too great a burden for the lone survivor, so they determined to drink the final toast this year. After their final meeting, citizens of Stillwater joined in a general program in honor of the trio.

Comrade Emil Goff, who had lived in St. Cloud, Fla., for a number of years prior to his death about a year ago, was a member of the club and the 31st man to drop from its roll, leaving the three others only to conduct its future activities.

Well at least—Chicago is turning from machine guns to boxing gloves. Civilization advances.

SEABOARD IS SENDING TRAVELING LECTURERS TO LURE NORTHERNERS TO FLORIDA THIS COMING SEASON

CREATE ENTHUSIASM

Word is received at press time that the first series of Seaboard lectures, delivered in New Jersey, created considerable enthusiasm and cheering for Florida.

Following the promise made by S. Davies Warfield, president of the Seaboard Air Line Railway, the last of February, in an address at St. Petersburg, Florida, the Seaboard Air Line Railway started on August 8th, three teams of lecturers with motion picture outfits, who will visit the middle west; New England states; New York; Pennsylvania; New Jersey and Maryland, on an illustrated lecture tour, to show through graphic pictures and lectures what Florida and the Southern country have to offer and the inducements this territory holds out to those who desire to avail themselves of the unusual opportunities afforded agricultural and other pursuits therein, according to E. J. Spence, T. P. A. for the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

In his address Mr. Warfield suggested that the State of Florida appropriate a sufficient sum of money to enable lecture tours throughout the country by the state as the most forceful way to bring Florida before the public and dispose of many misunderstandings made respecting Florida. He said the Seaboard Air Line Railway would co-operate in this work. Now, without awaiting action by the state the Seaboard Air Line Railway has inaugurated a campaign by bringing before the people by sight and lecture, the tremendous advantages the Southern country and Florida possess.

Motion and still pictures have been arranged to show the progress, development and prosperity that has followed the development of Florida, Georgia, Alabama, North and South Carolina, and Virginia, throughout the territory traversed by the Seaboard Air Line Railway.

The three lecturers accompanying these teams will state facts and figures as to development of this territory. The opportunity afforded at state and county fairs will be utilized in this work. Halls will be used at other points, invitations issued to public officials, members of agricultural Societies, and Grange Associations, that the opportunities offered by the South shall be understood.

As the Seaboard Air Line Railway has been the pioneer in Florida and other parts of the South in opening up territory, so does it now become the pioneer of the first campaign throughout the country, presenting incontrovertable facts with figures of the innumerable products of the southern country and Florida.

The Development Department of the Seaboard Air Line Railway will answer questions and give assistance to those interested in what they see and hear.

PASSENGER TRAVEL INTO FLORIDA IS GREAT

Railroad passenger travel into the state during the month of July was the greatest in the history of Florida, a group of passenger agents advised Jerry Carter, state hotel commissioner, at a recent conference in Tallahassee.

The agents attributed the unusually heavy travel to the advertising of Florida as a "year-round" state and to the return of hotel rates to a normal and reasonable plane, Mr. Carter said.

"According to these officials the expected summer slump did not materialize but instead an unprecedented stream of visitors availed themselves of cheap excursion rates to visit Florida in the summer.

The agents also expressed the belief that winter tourist traffic would be heavy due to normal conditions prevailing in the state.

The railroad group was headed by W. F. Canada, of the New York Central lines, W. Kennedy, of the Seaboard and J. J. O'Connor, of the Clinchfield Railroad Co. The Chicago and Northwestern and the Pennsylvania lines also were represented.

MONGOLS FREED AFTER 550 YEARS OF ENSLAVEMENT

After being held in bondage for 550 years, the descendants of the Mongols, who conquered China in the fourteenth century and who have been kept in a state of virtual slavery ever since in Chi Kiang Province, South of Shanghai, have been freed by a formal edict of Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, says a Peking dispatch to the New York World.

From the year 960 to 1127 the Sung dynasty ruled China undisturbed. Then, at the time of the crusaders in Europe, when Russia also was being overrun by Mongol tribes, the Mongols descended from the north and west into China. After a long period of civil war and chaos the Mongols founded the Yuan Dynasty, with Peking as their capital, in the year 1280. But this Dynasty lasted less than a century, being superseded in 1368 by the Ming Dynasty, which in turn was overthrown by the Manchus in 1644, the latter holding the peacock throne until the "republic" was founded in 1911.

CREATOR OF LYNCH LAW TURNED BACK TO THE WORLD

Do you know the origin of the term "Lynch law?" This phrase is now synonymous with "mob law" but originally it referred to executing a sentence which duly constituted authorities had failed to carry out.

It seems that in the 15th century the then Mayor of Galway, Ireland, a Mr. James Lynch, and his son, had a house guest, a young Spaniard. The two young men were close friends but in a quarrel about a woman, the Irish lad stabbed and killed the guest.

The father had to act as judge of the trial which resulted in a finding of murder—and he pronounced sentence of death according to English law, although Irish custom would have been more lenient.

The boy's mother roused all her kindred against the decree and no one could be found to carry out the sentence. Then James Lynch himself took his son through the crowd up to the tower and hanged him.

Lynch then returned home, shut himself up, and never again set foot out of his own door.
